

Japan -My dream destination

I think because it's so mysterious and culturally different Japan has to be my choice here. When I was eleven I saw a Kabuki play in Sydney. I didn't really know what was going on but I knew I liked the colours, the unusual outfits and the sound of the intricate and sensitive language.

To visit one of the hot springs around Tokyo is really my dream. I see Japan as a country with a great work ethic that also knows how to properly relax - http://www.japan-guide.com/e/e2292_where.html. The only problem is that I don't speak the language.

Japanese culture is already widely prevalent in the so called western world from sumo-wrestling and samurais to manga and Pokémon. I think with the rise of China and India and the refocusing of global economic and political attention Japan will enter our national consciousness even more. People should get on board now!
